Merriam Press Historical Fiction No. 16. First eBook Edition 2016. Citizens of Belfast, Northern Ireland were keenly aware of the war raging in Europe and elsewhere. They duly put up their blackout curtain, formed fire-watch patrols and stood in queues with their ration booklets. But they ignored the calls to evacuate women and children from the city. They never expected that the Luftwaffe would actually bother to attack their remote island. That complacency was shattered in April 1941. After that first attack, 18 year old Elizabeth Fleming refused to evacuate along with her two younger sisters, to the seaside town of Bangor. Just over a week later, Elizabeth was caught away from home during the second and most deadly attack. She was plagued with nightmares for months afterwards. In late April of 1942, Richard Harrison, a laboratory technician with the U.S. Army Medical Corps, boarded an army transport ship in route to Northern Ireland. Six weeks later the two would meet at a dance in a Belfast ballroom.
