It's Friday night. You're sitting at home alone, watching reruns on Lifetime, wondering why no one has chosen you yet. You're fed up, discouraged and downright angry. Trust me. I feel you. Don't believe the hype or what the statistics say. There are still quality men available, and many of them are ready, willing and able to marry! But, wait! Hold on, sister girl! Before you call David Tutera to plan your dream wedding, enjoy dating. Did I lose you yet? That's a lot of the problem. Many women want to skip the dating process and jump right to the honeymoon. All that does is frustrate you—and your potential mate. It's also frustrating because the dating advice that daddy offers his little girl when she's fresh out of high school, or advice from someone who hasn't had a date since the '89 prom, won't do in this crazy friend zone, technologically driven world. This is real and it's now! If you're wondering about it, more than likely it's covered in this book. So buckle your seatbelt. Hold on tight! It's going to be an exciting, but bumpy, ride!
