Fresh out of law school, Zach Morgan abruptly quit his position with an insurance defense firm to hang his own shingle and open a private practice. His first client was a transient who just learned that he was the sole beneficiary of his estranged brother's multi-million dollar estate. His brother was brutally murdered and the alleged killer was on trial in what appeared to be an open and shut case. Zach observed the riveting courtroom drama as the case unfolded and in the process, discovered a dark, deadly secret left by the murder victim. He soon learned that he was way over his head in his new practice and that his first case could cost him not only his career but his life.
