Horses Make a Landscape Look More Beautiful Alice Walker

Alice Walker has always turned to poetry to express some of her most personal and deeply felt concerns. She has said that her poems—even the happy ones—emerge from an accumulation of sadness, when she stands again “in the sunlight.” “[This collection] has two fine strengths—a music that comes along sometimes, as sad and cheery as a lonely woman’s whistling—and Miss Walker’s own tragicomic gifts” (New York Times Book Review).
